

Quhuo Ramps up Staff Support

BEIJING, Dec. 14, 2022 /PRNewswire/ -- Quhuo Limited (NASDAQ: QH) ("Quhuo" or "the Company"), a leading gig economy platform focusing on local community-centered services in China, has ramped up its efforts to offer more physical and mental support during the winter, as the Company continues to carry out social responsibility for delivery riders and gravitate towards the nation's common prosperity policy.

Quhuo has purchased a substantial amount of winter supplies to ensure better job safety for its delivery riders. As the temperature in many cities across China has reached negative 10 degrees Celsius, the Company launched a "warm" campaign and purchased RMB490,000 (approximately US$70,040) worth of more than 8,500 sets of cold protection supplies, including gloves, knee pads and scarfs, to give comfort and warmth for delivery riders when they are on delivery missions.

The Company also purchased thermal sleeping bags worth over RMB210,000 (approximately US$30,000) for more than 700 delivery riders to help them stay warm when they rest.

To incentivize the workforce during the upcoming Spring Festival, which falls in late January 2023, Quhuo plans to offer special bonuses to its delivery riders. With such a program in place, Quhuo aims to raise the pay for its delivery team and ensure stable logistics services during the holiday season.

In addition, Quhuo has participated in the formation of an industry union in Beijing with multiple companies and organizations for the welfare of workers engaged in flexible employment, including food delivery riders, logistics workers, and ride-hailing drivers. With the "Union Member Mutual Aid Service Card", Quhuo's delivery riders can enjoy a wide range of free services and perks. For example, protection insurance plans are available for non-work-related accidental injuries and family property losses. Additionally, the union provides all members with legal aid, job seeking, life assistance and other services. The union also offers discounted or free services and activities, such as vocational training, sports and fitness, park tours, book reading and movie viewing, to meet its members' work, life and entertainment needs.

"Quhuo is committed to taking good care of our staff with physical and mental support. It's part of our core value to consistently offer security and support for our delivery workforce," Lisa Li, the Company's Chief Human Resource Officer, said, adding that the staff perks align with the country's common prosperity goal.

"Quhuo has long served as a flexible staffing platform for many enterprises, and we have set up programs to offer high-quality vocational training," Lisa said. "This can open up new job opportunities for many workers interested in the gig economy."

Following the nation's common prosperity guideline, Quhuo aims to provide timely and sufficient support for employees, enabling them to obtain satisfaction from their employment.
